

924 Art: Plastic Recycled Sculpture Workshop

Date: Wednesday 15 May 2019

Venue: Warwick Arts Centre, University of Warwick, CV4 7AL (between Coventry and Kenilworth)

Cost: Online £229 (non IAPS members – additional £100)

This practical course can be undertaken by anyone and the knowledge gained from it adapted to teach or inspire independent learning with both boys and girls of varying ages. Lizzy Rowe, Oxford-based art historian, will present work by artists using recycled materials and the theme of fish. Emma Collins, contemporary textile designer/artist, will demonstrate how the theme of fish can be used practically. There will be the opportunity for delegates to create their own art work, as well as spend time meeting and sharing ideas with fellow art teachers. Please bring aprons, plastic materials, bags so that you can take your work home, and cameras to record your experience. Expect to have a great time!

Audience: All Art Teachers

Objectives: To help create awareness of the fact that the ocean is full of plastic and the fish are eating it. To put yourself in your students' shoes, opening your eyes and giving your opinions to what you see and then producing your own art work; recognize how beneficial visiting artists and art historians can be to the art education you deliver; appreciating the possibilities that waste plastic materials can present; seeing a wide variety of artists work and project ideas linked to the aquatic theme and how they can be used to motivate pupils of all ages and abilities, as well as sharing experienced ideas and meeting up with other art teachers.
